SAYS HE DIDN'T "SCRAMBLE" TEAM

COACH HOLT DENIES TRYING TO MISLEAD SPEIK.

VANDERBOOM OUT OF GAME

Specialist Says He Will Be Unable to Play at All This Season—
Other Gridiron Gossip.

Assistant Coach Holt denies that he deliberately "scrambled" the Wisconsin football team Saturday for the purpose of misleading Assistant Coach Speik of Chicago, who watched the game at Madison between Wisconsin and Lawrence. He said that previous combinations of players had not been satisfactory and the numerous changes were made only in the hope of improving the team. Speik, although he complimented the Badgers, went home with feelings of complacency in anticipation of the Chicago game. The fact that the Badgers were nearly scored upon twice by Lawrence on straight football, made him get away for long runs, made him exclaim to his companion:

"If that chap can run 40 yards with a kick-off and can get past all but the center in a delayed pass, 'Eckie' won't do much."

Head Coach King and Captain Vanderboom returned from Chicago, where they watched the defeat of Iowa. They have conferred with Assistant Coach Holt, but will not talk. Secret practice will be held each afternoon for part of the time, until the Chicago game.

Secret Practice Plan
A new plan of secret practice has been adopted at the University of Wisconsin football department. The secret work is done in the first hour of each afternoon, after which the gates of Camp Randall are thrown open for students and the public generally. The new scheme seems to work well, giving greater seclusion to the secret work and at the same time providing for side-line enthusiasm during the scrimmage work.

This matter of secret practice has been a bothersome problem at Madison. The coaches say that some secret work is essential. The students object to attending games, because they think it places them in the attitude of being suspected as spies and they have in previous years been found disinclined to pay to see the weekly games if they cannot be trusted to watch the daily practice. Side-line cheering at practice is also believed to be necessary in order to get the best of efforts out of the players. Cheers of commendation for good plays in practice are found as helpful in the development of the team in practice as rooting in regular games. The business management has so found that long continued secret practice operates against the college spirit and affects unfavorably the gate receipts. Out of these considerations the "all and all" system was devised and thus far it has been found satisfactory.

Vanderboom-Out-Entirely
Captain Vanderboom, who besides seeing the Chicago game at Marshall field Saturday, consulted a specialist in regard to his injured neck and other ailments, is said to be out of the game for the remainder of the season. It is said that the injury to his neck and jaw received in the Marquette game two weeks ago are not the most serious troubles he has. In fact it is declared that "Van" is a sick man and will not be able to return to the game. He has resumed his position in the state treasurer's office and does not appear on the football field. The last official statement from the training quarters concerning Vanderboom was that he had secured a silver plate to be worn in his mouth while at play, that it was doubtful whether he could play without quickly getting injured, but that he would have to get out for some practice this week if there was any chance of playing in the Chicago game, and that he would enter practice permanently this week.

Making Gridiron Good
A great effort is being made to get a good turf-covered field ready for the Chicago-Wisconsin game a week from Saturday. No football has occurred on the regular gridiron at Camp Randall this year, all the practice work and games thus far being held on the extra gridiron at the extreme west end of the athletic park.

The main field was coated with clay later in the summer and grass was planted in a thin top layer of mold. A man has been employed every day, all day long, sprinkling the field with a hose, coaxing the grass to grow. The autumn has been exceedingly dry, close to the record for dryness for the last eighteen years, the federal weather observer says, and it has been a difficult task to get the football field covered with green sod. The grass is responding to the constant watering, however, and Manager Downer feels that he will have a beautiful velvety-green carpet ready for the calked shoes of the Badgers and maroons October 21.

Chicago Is Redeemed
Saturday's games in a way redeemed Chicago for her small score of the previous week against Wabash college. The Midway institution overcame Iowa university, scoring forty-two points against the Hawkeyes' nothing and Wabash showed that her representative this year was strong, holding Northwestern University to a 5 and 0 score.

In her game with Case Scientific, Michigan was held for downs for the first time this season. The "little team" succeeded three times in taking the pigskin from the Wolverines, though the final result was 36 and 0.

In the east two surprises occurred. Pennsylvania had her entire team on the field against Swarthmore and only won the game by a 11 and 0 score, while Yale romped away with Syracuse, gaining victory on a 16 and 0 tally.

South Side Struggle
The South Side Milwaukee high school, which the local high school team will meet in the Cream City on November 11, proved herself Saturday to be exceptionally strong. She met the Appleton high on the latter's home field and rushed them off their feet to the tune of 23 to 0 in thirty-five minutes of play. Milwaukee's left half with long runs and her fullback with hurdles, and plunges won the victory. On the defense the South Side ends were instrumental in taking the ball away again and again, each one breaking up interferences and throwing their opponents for losses.

STOP THE PERNICIOUS POSTAL CARDS MAIL

Postoffice Department Places a Ban
Upon Their Being Sent Through the Mails.

The pernicious postal card, which has reached the deplorable stage, has been placed under the ban of the government and hereafter vulgar and obscene cards will be eliminated from the mails. Postmaster Nowlan has received an order from the department at Washington which orders all improper cards thrown from the mails. The work has commenced at the Janesville office and hereafter it will be useless for a person to mail an objectionable card, for it will never reach its destination.

Hundreds of these post cards are mailed in Janesville every day and now that the ban has been placed on them a large number will be thrown out. Of course, there is no objection to cards that do not bear obscene or suggestive pictures or language and they will be allowed to go through the mails as usual, but the practice of sending indecent cards will be stopped and stopped effectually. The order issued from Washington, a copy of which has been received in the Janesville office, is as follows:

Office of Postmaster General,
Washington, D. C., Sept. 28, 1905.

To All Postmasters:
In view of the large number of objectionable post cards recently deposited in the mails the attention of postmasters is especially directed to the provision of section 573 of the postal laws and regulations reading as follows:

"All matter which is manifestly obscene, lewd or lascivious—will, when deposited in a postoffice, be withdrawn from the mails and sent to the dead letter office."

Under the rule every post card bearing a picture or language that is obscene, indecent or improperly suggestive should be immediately withdrawn from the mails and forwarded without delay to the first assistant postmaster general, dead letter office. If there is a doubt as to whether a card is sufficiently objectionable to warrant its exclusion it should be forwarded to the first assistant postmaster general, division of correspondence, for decision, in accordance with paragraph 2, section 498, postal laws and regulations.

Postmasters are directed to exercise all possible vigilance in the enforcement of this regulation.

Business Assn. Meeting
A meeting of the Janesville Business Men's Assn. will be held Monday evening at the city hall, at 7:30 o'clock, for the purpose of voting the funds in the hands of this association into those of the Janesville Advancement Assn.

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER.

He Cured Himself of Serious Stomach Troubles, by Getting Down to First Principles.

A man of large affairs in one of our prominent eastern cities too close attention to business too little exercise and too many club dinners, finally began to pay nature's tax, levied in the form of chronic stomach trouble; the failure of his digestion brought about nervous irritability making it impossible to apply himself to his daily business and finally deranging the kidneys and heart.

In his own words he says: "I consulted one physician after another and each one seemed to understand my case, but all the same they each failed to bring about the return of my former digestion, appetite and vigor. For two weeks I went from pill to pill, from one sanitarium to another, I gave up smoking. I quit coffee, and even renounced my daily glass or two of beer, without any marked improvement."

"To make a long story short I finally bought a couple of packages at the nearest drug store and took two or three tablets after each meal and occasionally a tablet between meals, when I felt any feeling of nausea or discomfort."

"I was surprised at the end of the first week to note a marked improvement in my appetite and general health and before the two packages were gone I was certain that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was going to cure me completely and they did not disappoint me. I can eat and sleep and enjoy my coffee and cigar and no one would suppose I had ever known the horrors of dyspepsia."

"Out of friendly curiosity I wrote to the proprietors of the remedy asking for information as to what the tablets contained and they replied that the principal ingredients were aseptic pepsin (government test), malt, dextrase and other natural digestives, which digest food regardless of the condition of the stomach."

The root of the matter is this, the digestive elements contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food, give the overworked stomach a chance to recuperate and the nerves and whole system to receive the nourishment which can only come from food. Stimulants and nerve tonics never give real strength, they give fictitious strength, invariably followed by reaction. Every drop of blood, every nerve and tissue is manufactured from our daily food, and if you can insure its prompt action and complete digestion by the regular use of so good and wholesome a remedy as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, you will have no need of nerve tonics and sanitariums."

Although Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been in the market only a few years, probably every druggist in the United States, Canada and Great Britain now sells them and considers them the most popular and successful of any preparation for stomach trouble.

MORNING SERMON OF DR. LAUGHLIN

HIS SUBJECT WAS, "THE MIND OF THE MASTER."

FIRST ADDRESS AS PASTOR

Of the Presbyterian Church in This City—Strong and Interesting Discourse.

Yesterday morning Rev. Dr. Laughlin delivered his first sermon as pastor of the Presbyterian church here. He took for his theme, "The Mind of the Master," and said in part:

Must Have the Mind

The text for this morning's discourse is taken from one of the prison-written letters of the Apostle Paul. After his experience at Philippi in introducing the gospel to the western world he passed on to other places and coming in contact with the Roman authorities he was thrown into jail. The people at Philippi having a kindly feeling for their pastor determined to remember him in his emergency and sent him a present. This letter which he dispatched by the hand of his faithful friend, Epaphroditus, is his expression of thanks for the present received from Philippi. There is not a word of censure in this epistle from beginning to end. Its sweetness, gentleness and hopefulness are breathed in every line. It reaches its climax in the second chapter and fifth verse when the apostle says: "Have the same mind—or the same disposition—in you which was in Christ Jesus." One might think that in the weak and struggling condition of that young organization at Philippi it would have suggested to the prisoner that something more material was desirable. But not so. He knew what was essential to his success, and urged them first to have the mind of the Master. This was a mind of self-abnegation or self-forgetfulness. He was in the form of God, but took the form of a servant and was made in the likeness of men and being found in fashion of a man he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. He was rich but for our sakes became poor that we through his poverty might climb up into riches. That is the disposition in men which moves the world. Not the man who feels his importance, who struts and boasts of what he is and of what he has, but the man who forgets himself and enters into sympathy with those about him do we love and does the world remember. Not Roscoe Conkling with his aristocratic curl and his famous strut through the senate chamber, but Nelson Dingy the toiler on the committee of ways and means, do we hold in fond recollection. Not General Miles, but Theodore Roosevelt, we admire.

Do the Will of God
The mind of Jesus showed itself in a disposition to do the will of God. Early in life He said I must be about My Father's business. Later He said that it was His meat and drink to do the will of His Father who was in heaven.

Keith, Falconer, falling beneath a shower of stones hurled by Moslem hands, said, "It is every man's duty to do the will of God; no man should be afraid and everyone should do the thing that lies next him." What is it to do the will of God? You are saying that you would do the will of God if you only knew what it is. That is not a question difficult to answer. To do the will of God is to believe on Jesus Christ His Son. This is the work of God that you believe on Him whom He hath sent are the words of Jesus. This does not mean belief about Him, not belief in Him as you would believe in the existence of Washington or Napoleon Bonaparte. It is such a belief as carries with it the conformity to his teaching; it means a holy life, a clean life, a pure life, a life like the life of Jesus. Jesus stood for something definite in life. And that something was not Methodism, it was not Baptism, it was not Calvinism, it was manhood, it was truth, it was honesty and uprightness of conduct. As men stand for these virtues they are believers in Jesus and are doing the will of God.

Three Men in Boat
That Waedashore

Disciples of Jerome K. Jerome and the Simple Life Meet a Snag

in Rock River,
Yo ho, my lads, yo ho,
A sailing we will go;
We care no more for
The Janesville shore,
So yo ho, my lads, yo ho!
—"The Captain."

When Jerome K. Jerome wrote his story of "Three Men in a Boat" he little thought that the precepts he laid down for the trip down the Thames would be followed by three sons of Janesville society with much the same unpleasantness as his three heroes found. Wagner in his "The Simple Life" also laid down strict precepts as to living, but these do not count in this story. The Thames of England is a grand stream—a beautiful stream of water. Vessels of the Roman conquerors floated upon its bosom. The warships of the Vikings ascended its current. It is an ideal spot for recreation trip or a houseboat party. "The Rock" is a grand stream—a beautiful (dirty) stream. Canoes of the early Indians floated upon its bosom; the traders' canoes of the French ascended its current. It is an ideal spot for shallow and stumps. This is the setting for the play. Following the steps of the illustrious "Three Men in a Boat" three Janesville young men hired a vessel of huge dimensions and prepared to invade the sacredness of the undiscovered lower Rock. Their start was auspicious: the air balmy and not too hot. All emergencies, from famine and thirst, had been attended to by the worthy steward, "Heave oh, my lads," called the captain and up came the anchor. "Port your starboard oars and all pull together," and the crew diligently began their work. Fifteen minutes out one of the crew suggested it was time for the Quartermaster to pipe all hands to grog. Ten minutes later the same member suggested that the cook should pipe all hands to lunch and so the trip continued. But unlike the placid Thames the Rock is full of pitfalls for the unwary. Stumps and bars—sand bars—abound. Hard and fast aground they went. The noble craft shivered from stem to stern. An unquenchable fear, assuaged only by internal applications, broke out. The crew mutinied. They wanted the Captain to signal for a life-saving crew. The Captain thought they had enough life-savers on board. The crew rose in rebellion and wanted the Captain, the gallant Captain, to attach a tug and haul them off the dangerous reef. The Captain ordered the crew into the water to save their lives, the provisions and the boat. Sadly they obeyed and instead of the briny deep, the dangerous swim for hours, the clinging to floating spars and jetsam, the life on the raft amid the boundless waters of the deep, the lack of fluids and food and the long days and nights spent watching for the ship that did not come, they waited ashore and sadly and sorrowfully pulled their noble craft behind.

FRANK BALDWIN IS GIVEN HIS FREEDOM

On Payment of a Fine of $143 by His Friends—Behavior Must Be Exemplary Henceforth.

At four o'clock Saturday afternoon Frank R. Baldwin appeared in municipal court and amended his plea of "not guilty" to "guilty." Baldwin, is well remembered, is the harness-maker who was arrested in Chicago in company with Sarah Kenyon. Judge Philfield levied a fine of $200 and costs, amounting in all to $243, but agreed to withhold $100 of this amount during the good behavior of the defendant. Baldwin is to sign the temperance pledge and walk in the straight and narrow path hereafter. Upon his failure to do so he may be brought into court at any time and compelled to pay the balance of the fine or go to jail for a long term. The $143 was produced by friends who have been working in the man's behalf.

STEALING FORESTS IN THE FAR WEST

Timber Jobbers Secure Valuable
Tracts of Land on Very Easy and Simple Games.

(By Guy E. Mitchell.)
The great forests of the Pacific slope contain the finest merchantable timber in the world today, said a prominent Californian who was recently in Washington. But the noblest of forests are fast being moved down before the swash of commercialism, regardless of future lumber supplies or the source of our western water supply. Notwithstanding the violence of the government agents the work of despoiling the timber lands of the coast goes merrily on. The forest lands of the Mississippi Valley states are almost bare and the timber grabbers are working in full force in the unrivalled pine and cedar forests of Idaho, Washington and Oregon and in the redwood belts of California, yielding their almost incomprehensible cut of timber per acre. It is commonly believed in the west that unless some drastic action is taken, there will be no virgin forests 20 years from now, except in the forest reserves.

The present plan by which our people get possession of the timber lands is an improvement on the Benson and Hyde method. After investigating a region of timber country that he covets, the timber capitalist starts the report that if it were on the market he would pay a good price for it and this tip falls on fallow ground. The land is immediately entered under the timber and stone law by "settlers"—settlers whose object it is to sell to the capitalist. They are "dummy" but under the law it is impossible to prove that their intentions are not good, and after they have secured title from the government they can do what they choose with the land. The government safeguards are futile. The commissioner of the General Land Office himself has been quoted as officially stating that the government has lost over 100 million dollars on timber lands sold for the nominal price of $2.50 an acre, the great bulk of which, we all know, has gone into the hands of timber grabbers. Not only has the government lost this money, but the so-called settler has received only a tithe of it, and the worst of all is that the land is being recklessly denuded of its forest cover and our water courses are alternately raging torrents and dry beds.

Medals
Suitable medals and other awards for excellence in marksmanship have been provided as incentives for the men to attain a high degree of efficiency. Divided according to their records, the men will be arranged in classes so that the department will at all times know just who the best shots of the navy are and where they are stationed. The record of a ship both with small arms and the main and secondary batteries will be taken into consideration in assigning the ships of the navy to special lines of duty, and it will be the aim of the men to make such records that they will be chosen by the department to participate in the most highly prized cruises.

Was Mikasa Mutiny Victim?
Victoria, B. C., Oct. 8.—The steamer Tartar brought news from Japan that a story was current that the accident to the battleship Mikasa, at Sasebo, was the result of a mutiny on board, because of the resentment by the crew to the peace terms.

Robert W. Collins, the correspondent who was with Kuroki's army throughout the campaign, was a passenger on the Tartar and said that the story was given some credence in diplomatic circles in Japan.

RIFLE PRACTICE FOR THE SAILORS

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT WILL BE PREPARED FOR FUTURE

ESTABLISHES THE PRACTICE

Boarding Parties in the Navy Are Now Almost Obsolete, But the Sailors Fight Still.

Washington, D. C., October 9.—For the purpose of making the men of the navy of the United States as proficient in the use of small arms as they are with the big guns of their ships, the government is now establishing a target range at Guantanamo on the island of Cuba, that will be one of the most complete of its kind in the world. The navy of our country has a world-wide reputation as men who can hit more bulls-eyes with the big guns than do such remarkable execution in action than any other set of men and if the present program looking to still further accuracy in marksmanship goes through the same record will be established in the Select Guantanamo.

The selection of Guantanamo is ideal for the purposes of rifle practice. It is located on the reservation over which this government has control as a naval station and is removed from settlements so that practice of this character can be carried on with perfect safety. Last year the navy endeavored to hold its target practice at Yorktown but owing to the thickly settled character of the country and the consequent danger to people living in the vicinity it had to be abandoned. Modern small arms have such remarkable carrying capacity that a single shot will go a target might easily fly two miles distant and hit some innocent person. After careful consideration it was agreed that there was nowhere in this country a suitable place for this essential practice work.

Many Targets
A recent report to the department shows that already two hundred of these targets have been erected. When completed there will be five hundred and large as this number seems there will be none too many. On the contrary it is probable that are long an increase will have to be made. These ranges will be at 200, 300, 600 and one thousand yards and the firing line will be more than two thousand yards in length. The Guantanamo range will be utilized during the winter naval maneuvers. When these maneuvers take place there are an average of fifteen ships with a complement of four hundred men each in Cuban waters. This makes an aggregate of 6,000 men every one of whom will be required to do his "trim" at rifle practice. With such a number of men and the time at the disposal of the fleet more or less limited it will be easily seen that five hundred targets is none too many. At times there have been considerably more than this number of ships in these waters during such maneuvers and as this is to become the great target practice ground for the navy it will soon be necessary probably to double the targets on the range. It is the purpose of the department to have these targets in shape for the coming maneuvers which will be held either in December or January next.

Not As Boarders
Small arms are no longer used by boarding parties as in these days of high powered guns naval battles are fought with great distances between opposing fleets, but it is however essential that sailors and jacks should know thoroughly how to handle a gun effectively as they are frequently employed in landing operations and as infantrymen on shore. After the proper amount of practice naval officers say that the enlisted men of the navy will become as expert in the effective handling of small arms as the soldiers of the other arm of the service who have achieved distinction as marksmen.

Medals
Suitable medals and other awards for excellence in marksmanship have been provided as incentives for the men to attain a high degree of efficiency. Divided according to their records, the men will be arranged in classes so that the department will at all times know just who the best shots of the navy are and where they are stationed. The record of a ship both with small arms and the main and secondary batteries will be taken into consideration in assigning the ships of the navy to special lines of duty, and it will be the aim of the men to make such records that they will be chosen by the department to participate in the most highly prized cruises.

A MILTON GRADUATE DIES IN CHICAGO

Wesley Curtis Lowther Is Asphyxiated
In a Chicago Boarding House.

Wesley Curtis Lowther, a graduate of Milton college last June, whose home is in West Virginia, was found dead in a Chicago boarding-house yesterday morning. Lowther was a student at the Northwestern Medical college. A Chicago paper this morning prints the following regarding the sad incident:

Some mystery surrounds the death of Wesley Curtis Lowther, a medical student, who was found dead in a room occupied by him at 2908 Indiana avenue yesterday morning. Death was due to asphyxiation, according to the police of the Cottage Grove avenue station. Lowther's body was found at 4 o'clock in the morning by R. I. Hurley, who occupies an adjoining room. When Hurley entered Lowther's room he found it filled with gas and saw the student's body lying beside a window, which was partly open. Investigation showed that the gas from the only gas jet in the room had been removed. Hurley is a student at Northwestern Medical college, which Lowther attended. He and Lowther had been companions for a number of years, both having been graduated from Milton college, Milton, Wis., which was their home town. Both Hurley and the police are of the opinion that Lowther's death was accidental. Hurley explained the missing gas jet by saying that it had been removed in some manner several days ago. He declares Lowther, so far as he knows, had no reason to wish to end his life. "Wesley was engaged to be married," said Hurley, "and always had plenty of money. His parents live in West Virginia, where I understand they are in comfortable circumstances. One brother, L. D. Lowther, is an insurance man and has large mine holdings at Salem, W. Va." Hurley said his companion complained of feeling tired Saturday night and went to bed early. The talk of suicide is scoffed at in Milton today, where Mr. Lowther was well known and very popular. "He had no cause to do such an act," said one gentleman this morning when questioned. "He was a fine fellow."

of the Genuine Round Oak thirty-four years ago marked the change in heating of stoves from crudity to perfection. No other stove will burn all kinds of fuel with economy, success and satisfaction to the user.

In using coal, for instance, it has a double fire pot with center grate, which prevents the formation of clinkers and gives the hottest fire around the outside of the pot, instead of in the center.

It has a hot blast, used for soft coal only.

The air is taken in at the feed door, carried around the top of the fire pot and discharged on top of fire through a series of openings. This burns the soot and gases, and makes the smoke white, thus a steady, even fire can be maintained with the hot blast alone, burning coal from the top downward.

Then, for hard coal with or without magazine, and coke or wood, it is equally successful.

You simply cannot afford to pass the ROUND OAK by, if you need a heating stove.

Always look for the name "ROUND OAK" on the leg. There are hundreds of imitations.

"Yes, Fritz, you guessed it. That is the Round Oak Office Building. Tomorrow we will see the shops where the Round Oaks are made."

in which a man from the South undertakes to sweep up all the coin in the great financial center, but, to use his own expression, "breaks his broom in the attempt," and the actual running of the Great Puritury race by thoroughbred race horses, furnish the backbone of a most effective story. That David Higgins and Eleanor Montell, in intense heart interest, brightened by good, wholesome comedy, while the scenic embellishments are beautiful and realistic.

FASHION NOTES

Demi-Toilette Bodices.

The beginning of the braising season is always the signal for the appearance of a multitude of handsome drossy bodices and bodices. Each week seems to add its quota to the bounty already showered upon the woman fashionable. Not only at the matinees and evening performances does one see these styles at their best, but at the smart restaurants where society gathers for luncheons and informal suppers there is always to be found something unique in the way of demi-toilette bodices.

A few evening gowns there was seen at a famous hostelry a well-known woman wearing a graceful skirt of white taffeta with a separate bodice of the same material. The design had a detachable chemise of finest hand embroidery combined with a yoke effect of alternate bands of lace and puffing silk. Below the yoke the bodice was softly draped in horizontal folds, making the design charmingly fitted to the slight figure which it graced.

The Dutch neck with its deep round cut affords an opportunity for the display of very original ideas in yokes and chemisettes. In a blouse of white mellestine the front is trimmed with three rows of puffing one being in the center and one on each side of the opening. The front was cut away to the bustline in Dutch fashion showing a chemisette of "shirred chiffon," each row of shirring being separated by a band of rich cream lace. The lace was cut square, but just far enough down to expose the full lines of a perfect throat. The sleeves were shirred to the elbow and finished with ruffles of lace. At this point they were met by long light gloves.

Lace in all guises is one of the most fashionable trimmings for both bodices and gowns, and this leads one to remark that some of the afternoon frocks have charming bodices which may be copied in separate blouses. One such design is in pale watermelon pink chiffon cloth, the skirt trailing slightly, and the bodice has two distinctive features—a V-shaped chemisette and elbow sleeves, most effectively modelled. The upper part of the skirt is shirred, while the lower is cut in sections which are joined by puffed bands headed by ruchings.

At the back there is a full length box plait at the back, which has the effect of being continued up the center—being of the bodice, which is trimmed with puffs and lace arranged to describe fanciful designs. The sleeves are puffed above the elbow, but where they meet the long close-fitting undercuff there are stitched folds ending in a narrow ruffle which forms a heading for the lace cuff.

Another charming toilette the bodice of which can serve as a separate waist is of grey satin, the skirt being tucked around the hips and finished at the bottom with an embroidery of green leaves and dark blue blooms, very tiny in size. The bodice is cut V-shaped and has a vest of lace and tucks. This V-shaped border is finished with a double row of small dark blue satin buttons and an applique of embroidery borders the armholes of the sleeves. Beyond the vest the bodice has no other lace trimming save two deep bands of applique between inset of filigree insertion. The full puffs end at the elbow and are met by suede gloves.

Those who do not like such an expansive front as is afforded in the fashionable Dutch effects, will find a variety of treatment in a bodice of Nile green silk. The design is shirred at the shoulders to a depth of seven rows; in fact the entire front of the blouse is draped in transverse effect across the figure and shirred at the opening with a double heading. The vest is of heavy cream lace, but it is so divided that an inner vest is formed by bands of darker green satin which start from the shoulders and cross in V-shape above the bust line under a trimming of embroidered medallions. The deep collar extends down the front in pointed effect, and the sleeves are shirred at frequent intervals, forming a series of graceful puffs from shoulder to wrist.

The use of embroidered and lace medallions is very noticeable in the new trimmings for waists, and eyelet embroidery continues the wide popularity which it has enjoyed for two seasons past.

FOR WASHING FLANNELS

All woolen goods like underwear and blankets are washed best with Beach's Peosta soap, because such fabrics cannot be rubbed, and hot water cannot be used. By soaking woolens in Peosta suds and rubbing the finer pieces between the hands only, good results are obtained.

A JUST DECISION.

One of the prominent features of every strike is the picket system, where men are detailed from the union ranks to stand guard at factories which are affected by the strike, and intimidate new employees.

The professional object is to use the art of persuasion by peaceable argument, but the ostensible object is to prevent the "scab" from work, and to tie up the industry by fair means or foul.

The picket line has long been recognized as a dangerous line, and many crimes have resulted because the law seemed helpless to interfere.

It is gratifying to know courts of justice have recently been inspired with a little backbone on this question of picketing and much credit is due to the Employers' Association for the inspiration.

There is just now going on in various parts of the country what is known as the printers' strike, under the auspices of the International Typographical Union. This organization represents an intelligent body of well paid workmen with a fund of $600,000 in its territory.

It secured some two years ago a nine hour work day at ten hours' pay, and now attempts to cut the work day to eight hours with the same pay.

The organization is opposed by the National Typographical Association, composed of employing printers, with representatives in every city in the land.

The first outbreak occurred in Chicago some six weeks ago when some seven or eight hundred men went out. The picket system was established and three members of the Franklin Union of Press Feeders were arrested, fined $100 each, and sent to jail for 30 days.

They were tried before Judge Smith in the appellate court and found guilty. In pronouncing sentence the judge said:

"There is no such thing as peaceful, polite and gentlemanly picketing."

"Such a thing is as impossible as chaste, polite and gentlemanly vulgarity, or peaceful mobbing or lawful lynching. Certainly, if the union man has a union behind him and a picket line supporting him, he will promptly endeavor to exterminate the scab at sight."

"It is idle talk of picketing for lawful persuasive purposes. Men do not form picket lines for the purpose of lawful persuasion and of conversation."

"Courts should be practical, when they form an opinion from evidence it must be a practical one. They have no opportunity, no license for stargazing or for indulging in poetic fancy. In imagination and in theory a peaceful picket line may be possible, but in fact a picket line is never peaceful."

"This is simple justice and it is surprising that the ruling of Judge Smith is not universal in every court where the question of picketing being investigated."

There is no law to prevent a man from striking whenever he feels so disposed, but when he attempts to prevent his neighbor from working by intimidation, he becomes a lawbreaker, and should be dealt with accordingly.

The printers' strike will fail, as it deserves to. Some 50 shops in Chicago which are affected, are now running as open shops with a full complement of men, and by the first of the year the open shop policy will be adopted throughout the country.

The printers, unlike the builders, and many other trades, have indoor work the year round. They are paid good wages and a good man need never be out of work. The price of commercial printing is already high, and an hour out of the work day means an advance of 12 per cent in the cost of production which the public in the end would have to pay.

It is unfair and the employers will not submit. The printers should have been satisfied to let well enough alone. There are thousands of good men outside the unions, and public sentiment concedes their right to work.

THE MOTIVE POWER.

"To its patrons a modern store or shop may mean many things. It may mean simply a pleasant shopping place; or it may mean a 'house of opportunities,' a place with all of the magnetic virtues 'bargains' can give it, aided by its reputation for up-to-dateness in its service, equipment, goods."

But, no matter what the store means to the patron, to the owner it means—in the final analysis—a money machine.

The net product of this money machine is the thing about it which interests him most.

And the net product depends upon many things.

In the first place, there's a streetful—a city-full—of these money machines, all grinding away, each one's net product being determined by the skill and intelligence of the mind that controls and guides and operates it.

Walking along any of our streets you will be impressed with the fact that here and there is to be found one of these money machines that is sadly out of repair—another that has been wholly wrecked and abandoned—still another that is running with a creak and a "crunch" which betokens "something wrong" with the operator-in-charge, and which forecasts an early collapse.

To expand the simile of the Money Machine: the operator, with the one object and purpose of net product, feeds into the machine, every business day, a great variety of "raw material"—such as dependable goods, price-concessions, polite service, style-reliability, continued novelty—out of these things, and many more like them, the machine turns out finished dollars, net profits, for the merchant—or operator.

It may be asked where, in connection with this machine, publicity comes in—what part newspaper advertising plays in arriving at this net product of dollars. The answer is that publicity is simply the motive power which runs the money machine—that's all!

When the machine runs haltingly it is usually because the operator has concluded that its operation is costing too much money, and that the place to economize is on motive power.

No instance has yet been known of a railroad determining that as fuel is costly they will abandon steam and run their locomotives by hand-power. But that would be as good a policy as for a big store—or any kind of a store or enterprise—to abandon publicity, or use it too sparingly, as a motive power.

It is remarkable, too, that the Taft train broke the record when we consider the weight it carried.

PRESS COMMENT.

Chicago Inter Ocean: It is said that there will be 200 counts in the Dougherty indictment. When Peoria wakes up she can be almost as determined as Milwaukee.

Milwaukee Sentinel: A Chicago professor decides that the average American lives beyond his means. Maybe the professor has been keeping tabs on occupants of automobiles.

Oshkosh Northwestern: Some of the eastern theatrical managers are talking of abolishing music from their play houses. As a matter of fact, however, if they really attempt the experiment they will be very liable to abolish their audiences at the same time.

Two Rivers Chronicle: Hicks, the weather prognosticator, did not hit September weather within a mile of the center. In fact, September showed him to be only a weather faker. He doesn't know half as much about the weather as the man who has a "touch of rheumatism."

Winneconne Local: Ella Wheeler Wilcox is advising the girls to "work hard and marry early." Ella could as well as not have left out the "work hard" part of it. If the girls take up with the balance of the advice they can be guaranteed steady employment at cooking and patching—for their masculine mates.

Chicago Record-Herald: "George," said his wife, "I want you to be charged that office boy of yours. Six times, when I tried to call you up by phone today, he told me you were out and then snapped me off before I could ask where you had gone or when you would be back." Yet he went next day and gave the office boy a raise of $3 a week. Such are the ways of men.

Evening Wisconsin: The cheese-maker near Dodgeville who was fined $25 for using unclean apparatus is probably now convinced that the consumers of food products have rights which manufacturers can not ignore. An active state dairy and food commission can find many instances of trifling with articles whose consumption might be detrimental to public health.

Evening Wisconsin: The Portland exposition, which will run to the end of the present month, promises to beat the record, by achieving financial success that will assure not only the repayment of stockholders, but the declaration of a handsome dividend. This was made possible because the directors of the Portland exposition kept down expenses, which is always a wise thing to do.

Chicago Chronicle: A resident of the fashionable New York suburb of Larchmont has offered a reward of $250 for information as to the identity of the automobilists who ran over and killed his pug dog. Eventually public sentiment at reckless motoring will reach such a height that somebody will offer a reward for the conviction of the chauffeur who kills a human being. We are gradually working up to it.

Chicago Tribune: It is highly interesting, now that the Ben Davis apple has become a national issue, to note that a native of Missouri, writing to the New York Sun from the apple belt of that state, represents the Ben Davis as being even worse than its reputation. It is utterly unfit for any purpose except for selling. The idea that a good cook ever uses it in making a pie he declares to be absurd—she would as soon think of making a pie out of bass-wood. Evidently the Kansas City Journal has been imposed upon, and owes its readers an apology.

Ford in Lac Repor: The class of people who can afford automobiles can also afford to wage a campaign for good roads. They are able to employ lobbyists to appear before the legislative committees and urge good road legislation. They are able to bring many strong influences to bear on the matter and they are doing it. The final result is bound to be good, despite the occasional careless chauffeur. Accidents are not so frequent as they once were and it will be but a short time when the auto will have no more terror for the average horse than the bicycle now has. If instead of stretching wire across the road and shooting holes in auto tires, the farmers will join in the good roads movement, they will be putting money in their own pockets.

Exchange: The Y. M. C. A. secretary at Sioux Falls who thinks that the practice of young men escorting young ladies to church on Sunday evening should be abandoned, because young ladies are so distracting that the escorts think of nothing else, and fail to "get religion," runs the risk of being accounted a sensationalist. So does the Episcopalian authority in New York responsible for the order by which all the stone figures of angels for the Cathedral of St. John the Divine have been relocated, so that they represent angels instead of the woman angels, if angels have the attribute of sex; and if angels are the spirits of the just, made perfect, and church attendance is a characteristic of righteous living, the additions to the angel host which are made in the present age include more women than men.

Leading Citizen Goes Wrong.

Milwaukee Free Press: The little city of Peoria, Ill., got a black eye on Thursday when its "first citizen" was indicted and arrested on a charge of issuing a fraudulent check. This check was the first one taken up, although a string of more serious matters were uncovered one after another in quick succession. The indicted man has been the trusted banker, financier, agent for estates, superintendent, not of a Sunday school, to be sure, but of the public schools; late president of the National Teachers' association, one of the custodians of its funds; and the reputed closest friend of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia college. This friendship, it is supposed, the greatest thing that ever happened. The name of the defuncter is Newton C. Dougherty, and the greatest loss, unless there was security for their funds, will be the public schools of Peoria. As the amount of the defalcations is already known to aggregate half a million dollars, it is likely that it will in time be shown to be much more than that. Such accounts are liable to grow. The manner of Dougherty's crooked work was bungling. He presented bills to the school board, recommending their allowance, which followed. A bill for $27, was changed to $700 after being allowed and ordered paid. The stub in the check book shows but $27. This was the usual method, followed by the leading citizen. The case of Dougherty was peculiar, in that the exposure finally came through a clerk in the bank of which he was president. This clerk, a mere boy—too young to be trusted, with so much knowledge as he possessed—told the grand jury some things he knew, and the grand jury did the rest.

Things of the Daily Press.

Mothers--Think Of This.

Do you want a new cloak this fall? Do you want the relaxation and enjoyment of a little visit somewhere during the holidays? Do you want any little luxury you have not heretofore felt like indulging in? You can take your pick of most any of these things, because you will have the money left in your inside pocket wherewith to secure it, IF you send the family to Dr. Richards for the needed dentistry this fall. You will get the very best of service.

The most careful efforts toward saving you pain. The best of material in every respect, and his prices, while they satisfy him and give him a good return for his time, are really about one-half what you would pay elsewhere.

HIGH CLASS VAUDEVILLE.

With the change of the decoration of the dining-room, the plate rail of today is not covered with an odd lot of imported china plates, cups and saucers with other cheap china. But few are used at present, and these of only the finest quality. Imported china has had its day, so to speak, and the few pieces used are practically hand-painted by some artist well known by the public. Very little bric-a-brac is seen in the modern furnished home, the high colors of wall-papers and hangings forming all the decorations necessary. Buyers will pay more attention to the purchase of solid silver, cut glass and silver decorated ware during the coming holiday season than ever before. The gift of a piece of solid silver is a pleasant reminder of the giver for many years to come and this same silver can be handed down as keepsakes to following generations.

JOHN FARSON IS MUCH IN EARNEST

SAYS HE LIKES JANESVILLE VERY MUCH INDEED

AND TALKS OF INTERURBANS

Says That His Giant Combine Will Spend Five Million Dollars on the System.

Should Janesville be fortunate enough to succeed in interesting John Farson in Janesville and Janesville's future it will be fortunate for all concerned. Mr. Farson evidently hopes to extend the Rockford-Janesville line to Madison, providing he obtains the franchise which he desires. In this he has the hearty support of the business men of the city, as all are anxious this line reach Madison, thus opening up a new territory for trade.

In a letter written by Mr. Farson to a friend in Janesville, received this morning, the Chicago banker thanks his correspondent for his kindness and interest and says: "It is a pleasure to me to become interested in your country and assure you I will do everything possible for the City of Janesville. I congratulate you upon the manifest evidence of prosperity which I found on my recent visit to Janesville."

Mr. Farson's Birthday Yesterday was Mr. Farson's birthday. As he expressed it in an interview in a Chicago paper, he came to Chicago with little money and much determination. He stands among the leaders today of the bond brokers of the country and his recent acquisition of the Rockford, Beloit and Janesville interurban places him in direct touch with southern Wisconsin and its development.

The Chicago Story The Chicago Journal said on Saturday that with the network of electric interurban railways already spread over northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin, connecting Chicago with many cities and towns, a work of extension is planned for next year which will give Chicagoans direct electric transportation to Madison, Wis., and intermediate points, via Belvidere, Rockford, Beloit and Janesville. The announcement of this extension was made Saturday by John Farson of Farson, Leach & Co., who declared that his company will spend $5,000,000 in the extension of this important work in addition to the $5,000,000 already invested. Other possibilities of the near future are connections from Chicago through to Dubuque, Iowa, and from Chicago through Rockford, to Dixon, Ill., and from there still further west to Moline and Rock Island.

MISSING MAN IS FOUND IN RIVER

REMAINS OF GEO. VOSBURG WHO ESCAPED FROM ASYLUM, FOUND HAD COMMITTED SUICIDE

Tied His Hands with a Rope and Jumped Into the River to End His Troubles.

Yesterday morning several small boys found the body of a man floating on the upper edge of Goose Island, partly in the water and partially out, with his hands tied with binding twine. The police were hastily notified and the remains taken to the morgue of F. D. Kimball. Here it was identified as the remains of George Vosburg, who escaped from the insane asylum last Tuesday. The body was removed from the morgue this morning and taken to Beloit, where the burial took place this afternoon.

Clearly Suicide It was clearly a case of suicide, although the finding of the hands bound together at first led to the talk of murder. Vosburg was an expert swimmer and it is thought that he tied his hands together to keep from saving himself when he was in the water. He escaped from the asylum Tuesday and it is thought that he went immediately to the river. The position of the cords on the wrists also substantiates this theory.

Talked Suicide Mr. Vosburg came to the asylum two years ago from Beloit. He was not violently insane, but he has had the suicidal mania for some time. On different occasions he has told inmates of the same ward he was confined in that he would kill himself if he got a chance. He was closely watched in consequence and immediately after his absence was noticed searching parties began their fruitless hunt for him. He evidently went directly to the river and jumped in, having provided himself for tying his hands before leaving the asylum. The hand appearance of the remains shows that they had not been in the water long and the warm weather of the past week caused the body to rise quicker than is usual in this season of the year.

A Romance of the Days When the Lord Redeemed the Children of Israel From the Bondage of Egypt

CHAPTER XXVIII.

"THE PHARAOH DREW NIGH."

IN midafternoon of the following day Kenkeus awoke and made ready to take up his search again. He was weary, listless and sore, but his mission urged him as if death threatened him.

At sunset he was again upon the way, taking the level highway of the Wady Toomilit for a mile toward the west and turning south after that distance.

The road was good, and he ran with old time ease. At midnight he came upon the spot where the army had camped, but the Pharaoh had already moved against Israel. He had left his track. The great belt of disturbed earth wheeled to the south, and as far as Kenkeus could see there was the same luminous veil of dust overhanging it that he had noted over the path of Israel.

In the early hour of the morning Kenkeus emerged from a high walled valley with battlemented summits. Before him was the army encamped. Kenkeus approached it, dropping with weariness, and after a time was passed through the lines and conducted to the headquarters of the king. About the royal pavilion in triple cordon paced the noble bodyguard of the Pharaoh.

Of one of these Kenkeus asked that a personal attendant of the king be sent to him.

In a little while some one emerged from the Pharaoh's tent and came through the guard line to the messenger. It was Nechutes.

"Nechutes," Kenkeus said in a strained voice, "thou and I are friends. Lead me to the king, I pray thee."

"To the king?" the cupbearer repeated doubtfully. "The king sleeps. Will these interests go to wreck if thou bidst him turn?"

"I carry him a message," Kenkeus explained. "Hand him a torch."

In the wavering light of the flambeau Nechutes read the address on the linen scroll.

"The king could not read by the night lights," he said after a little.

"Where is Har-hat?"

"In his tent yonder," pointing to a party colored pavilion.

"Let the unhappy king sleep, then. Nechutes, far be it from me to bring him back to the memory of his sorrows. Lead me to thy shelter, if thou wilt."

With satisfaction in his manner, Nechutes conducted his guest into a comfortably furnished tent and showed him a mattress overlaid with sheeting of fine linen.

At the first glimmerings of the dawn the melody of many winded trumpets arose over the encampment of the Egyptians. Now the notes were near and clear, now afar and tremulous; again deep and sonorous, now full and rich, and yet again fine and sweet.

While the army broke its fast and prepared to move the king stood in the open space before his tent with his eyes on the east. The Red Sea lay there beyond the uplifted line of desert sand, and it was the birthplace of many mists and unpropitious signs.

Would the sun look upon the king through a veil or openly? Would he smile upon the purposes of the Pharaoh?

There were stridations, watery and colorless, in the lower slopes of the morning sky, and these were taking on the light of dawn without its hues. Long wind blown streaks crossed the zenith from east to west, and the setting stars were blurred. The moon had worn a narrowing circle in the night. Menepthah shook his head.

Suddenly some in the ranks of the royal guard exclaimed to a mate:

"Look! Look to the southeast!"

Menepthah turned his eyes in that direction, as though he had been commanded. There, above the spot where he had guessed the Israelites to be, a straight and mighty column of vapor extended up, up into the smoky blue of the sky. The tortuous shapes of the stridations across the zenith indicated that there was great wind at that height, but the column did not move or change its form. It was further distinguished from the clouds over the dawn by a fine amber light upon it, deepening to gold in its shadows—so vivid the tint that steady contemplation was necessary to assure the beholders that it was not fire climbing in and out of the pillar's heart. Egypt's skies were rarely clouded and never by such a formation as this.

Menepthah turned his troubled eyes hurriedly toward the east. He must not miss the sunrise. At that moment, unheralded, the disk of the sun shot above the horizon as if blown from a crater of the underworld—blurred, milky white, without warmth.

He turned away and faced Nechutes, bending before him; behind the cupbearer a stately stranger—Kenkeus.

At a sign from the king the messenger came forward, knelt and delivered the scroll.

"What is contained herein?" Kenkeus took it, that the inquiry called for an answer.

"A warning, O king."

"As if to delay the reading of it, the king dismissed Nechutes and signed Kenkeus to arise. Then he turned the scroll over and over in his hands, inspecting it.

"Come," he exclaimed as if an idea had struck him, "do thou open it."

Kenkeus took the scroll thrust toward him and ripped off the linen wrapping. Unrolling the writing he extended it to the king. "Read it," was the next command. "Mine eyes are dim of late," he added apologetically.

Kenkeus obeyed, reading without emphasis or inflection, for he knew no expression was needed to convey the force of the message to the already intimidated king.

When Kenkeus had finished, Menepthah bent very close to him, as if assured of shelter in the heroic shadow of the tall young messenger. The color had receded from the monarch's face, and his eyes had widened till the white was visible all around the iris.

"Not enough that mine enemies neglect me, but mine own must stab me in my straits. Not even the identity of mine assassin revealed, and there is none on whom I may call with safety and ask protection."

"Nay, beloved of Ptah," Kenkeus interrupted. "There be true men among thy courtiers."

"Not one—not one whom I may trust," Menepthah declared hysterically. "Here am I, then."

"Who art thou?" demanded the king. "Kenkeus, the son of Mentu, thy architect."

"It cannot be," the king declared, with suspicion in his eye. "He had but one son, and he must be dead with the firstborn."

"Nay, I was in the land of Goshen the night of death, and the God of Israel spared me. Being of the house of Mentu, thou hast no fear of my steadfastness, O my sovereign."

"Nay, would that I might be as trustful of all my ministers. Alas, that a single traitor should lay the stain of infamy upon all the court! Ah, what a little enemy!"

The sentence, more exclamatory than questioning, seemed to the young man like a call upon him to voice his laments. The king, with his eyes upon the young man's countenance, caught the change of expression.

"Speak!" he cried violently. "Thou knowest! Thou knowest!"

A sudden ebullition of rage and vengeance sent a tingling current through the young man's veins. The moment had come. He faced the king fairly and made no search after ceremonious words. He spoke as he felt—intensely.

"Nay, it is thou who shalt tell me, O my king. I know thee, even as all Egypt knows thee. There is no power in thee for great evil, but behold, to what depths of misery is Egypt sunk! Through thee? Ay, if we charge the month for the word the mind will it to say. Have the gods afflicted thee with madness or have they given thee into the compelling hands of a knave? Nay, who is it, thou or another, who playeth a perilous game with Israel this day when its God hath already rent Egypt and consumed her in wrath? Like a wise man thou admittest this error and blindest thy scourge depart, and, ere thy words are cold thou dost arise and recall them and invite the descent of new and hideous affliction upon thine empire! Behold the winnings of thy play thus far! From Pelusium to Syene a waste full of famine mourners and dead men and among these last thy Ramesses!"

Menepthah did not permit him to finish. Purple with an engorgement of grief and fury, the monarch broke in, snatching the air with his arms.

"Har-hat!" he cried. "Not I—Har-hat, who consumed me!"

The voice rang through the royal inclosure, and the ministers came running.

Foremost was Har-hat. At sight of his enemy the king put Kenkeus between him and the fan bearer. At sight of Kenkeus Har-hat stopped in his tracks.

Behind followed Kephren and Seneferu, the two generals, who, with the exception of Har-hat, the commander in chief, were the only army bearing men away from their places among the soldiers; after these Hotep and Nechutes, Menes of the royal bodyguard, the lesser fan bearer, the minor attaches to the king's person—in all a score of nobles.

The fan bearer did not look at the king. It was Kenkeus who interested him.

The young man's frame did not show a tremor nor his face any excitement. He crossed the little space between him and the fan bearer.

"What hast thou done with the Israelites?" he asked in a tone so low that none but Har-hat heard him. But the fan bearer did not doubt the earnestness in the quiet demand.

"She escaped me," the fan bearer answered. "Hast thou spoken truly?"

"I have said, as Osiris hears me. Have done, I have no more time for thee!"

"Stand thou there. I have not done with thee."

The thin nostril of the fan bearer expanded and quivered violently.

"Have a care, thou insolent!" he exclaimed.

Kenkeus did not seem to hear him. He had turned toward Menepthah.

"I have dared overfar, my king," he said, "because of my love for Egypt and my concern for thee. Bear with me further, I pray thee."

Menepthah bent his head in assent. "Suffer mine inquiry, O son of Ptah. Wilt thou tell me upon whose persuasion thou hast gathered thine army and set forth to pursue Israel?"

"Upon the persuasion of Har-hat, my minister."

"Yet this question further, my king: Wherefore would he have thee overtake these people?"

"Since it was foolish to let them go, being my slaves, my builders and very needful to Egypt, but most particularly to execute vengeance upon them for the death of my Ramesses and for the firstborn of Egypt."

"Ye heh!" Kenkeus said to the nobles. Then he faced Har-hat. The fan bearer's countenance showed a remarkable increase of temper, but there was no sign of apprehension or discomfort upon it.

"Thou hast beheld the grace of thy king under question," Kenkeus said calmly. "Therefore thou art denied the plea that submission to the same thing will belittle thee. Thy best defense is patience and prompt answer."

"Perchance the king will recall his graceful testimony," Har-hat replied with heat. "When he learns he hath been entangled in the guilty pursuit of a miscreant after!"

Kenkeus stopped him with a menacing gesture.

"Say it not, nor tempt me further! Thou speakest of a quarrel between thee and me, and of that there may be more hereafter. Now thou art to answer to mine impeachment of thee as an offender against the Pharaoh."

Har-hat received the declaration with a wrathful exclamation.

"Thy dearest enemy, O Har-hat," Kenkeus continued, "would not impugn thy wits. Thou seest Egypt. Not in all the world is there another empire so pitiously humbled. Her fields are white with bones instead of harvests; her cities are loud with mourning over commerce; the desert hath overrun the valley, and this from the hands of the Hebrews' God. Who doubts it? Hath Egypt won any honor in this quarrel with Israel? Look upon Egypt and learn. Hath the army of the Pharaoh availed him ought against these afflictions? Remember the polluted waters, the pests, the thunder, the darkness, the angel of death, and tell me, 'Vengeance? Vengeance upon a God who hath blasted a nation with his breath? Clannishness of a people whose murmur brought down consuming fire upon the land? And yet for vengeance and chastisement, hast thou urged the king to follow after Israel? I know thee better, Har-hat. That servicable wit of thine hath not failed thee in an hour. Thou hast not waded of life that thou courtest destruction by the Hebrews' God. Never hast thou meant to overtake Israel! Never hast thou thought further to provoke thy God! Rather was it thine intent here, somewhere in the desert, thyself to be a plague upon Menepthah and wear his crown after him!"

Har-hat folded his arms and forced the issue.

"Both the hour and need of my proof are past. Already art thou convicted," Kenkeus indicated the king and the ministers behind him.

Har-hat was alone. Before him were all the powers of the land arrayed against him. Behind him in Tanis was Seti, the heir, who hated him, and the queen who had turned her back upon him. He had not seen the need of friends during the days of his supremacy over Menepthah. Now not all his devious, eloquence, subtleties, could establish him again in the faith of the frightened king. His ministership had crumbled beyond reconstruction. What would avail him, then, to defend himself? What proof had he to offer against this impeachment? The young man's argument met him at every avenue toward which he might turn for escape. At best his future in Egypt would be mere toleration; the worst, a durable punishment.

A flame of feeling surged into his face. With a wide sweep of his arm, as though to thrust away pretense, he faced the ministers, all the defiance and audacity of his nature faithfully manifested in his manner.

"Why wait ye? Would ye see me cringe? Would ye hear me deny, protest, deprecate? Go to, ye glowering churls! I disappoint you! Flock to the king; dandle the royal babe awhile! Endure the stress a little, for ye will not serve him long. And thou," whirling upon Kenkeus, "darest thou I fear this bloody God of Israel or all the gibbering, incense sniffing, pedestal cumbering gods of earth? I will show thee, thou huddling rabble spawn! See which of us hath the yellow haired wig upon us when I return! For I go to wrest spoil and fighting men from Israel. Then, by all the demons of Ananti—then, I say—look to thy crown, thou puny, puny king!"

With a bound, he broke through the cordon of royal guards, leaped into his chariot and, putting his horses to a gallop, drove at full speed to his place at the head of the army. There, in an instant, clear and long drawn, his command to mount rang over the desert. Front and rear, wing and wing, the trumpets took up the call "To horse!" A second command in the strong voice, a second winking of the many trumpets, and with a rush of air and jar of earth the great army of the Pharaoh swept like the wind toward the sea.

Kenkeus, Menes, Nechutes and those of the royal guard that had started in pursuit of the traitor did well to save themselves from annihilation under the hoofs of 20,000 horse. Revolvered and amazed, they were an instant realizing what was taking place.

"He is running away with the army!" they said to themselves in a daze. "He is running away with the army!" And they knew that not all the efforts of the guards and the ministers and the Pharaoh himself would avail, for the army had received its orders from its great commander and no man but he might turn it back.

Menepthah, raging and weeping, saw his army leave him and gallop in an aureole of dust toward the Red sea.

"Thus it was that the Pharaoh drew nigh," but came no farther after Israel.

'RUN' ON BANK OF PEORIA BEGUN

Depositors Fear Funds Are Not on Hand For Those Who Would Withdraw.

MORE INVOLVED IN SCANDAL

Grand Jury, It Is Believed, Will Seek Evidence Implicating Others—
Fresh Batch of Revelations Expected at an Early Date.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 9.—The failure of the Peoria National bank, brought on by the startling indictments against Newton C. Dougherty on Saturday, resulted in runs on the Dime Savings bank and the Central National bank. Dougherty is a large stockholder in the Dime Savings bank. Hundreds of depositors, a majority of them women and girls, crowded into its offices and demanded their money, while others, unable to get in, were massed on the sidewalk waiting for their turn.

The first arrivals were paid in full, but later George W. Curtis, vice president and general manager, consulted with President Oliver J. Bailey, president of the school board and a close friend of Dougherty, and it was decided to post a 60-day notice regarding withdrawals.

"We have $500,000 on hand," said Mr. Curtis, "but we will pay only in emergency cases. The bank is as solid as a rock, and there is no danger. Our depositors have about $2,000,000 with us, and we are able to meet their demands as prescribed by the state laws."

Fully $37,000 Withdrawn.
Fully $37,000 had been withdrawn when the bank's officials decided to avail themselves of the law which compels depositors to give sixty days' notice before taking out their deposits. There are 10,000 depositors.

The Dime Savings is a state concern, capitalized at $25,000, and is considered one of the strong smaller banks of the city. The run is attributed entirely to the fact that O. J. Bailey, the president, is a member of the school board and has been associated in business with Dougherty.

The run on the Central National bank, in which a small amount of the funds of the school board have been deposited, was started a few minutes before the closing hour Saturday, and several thousand depositors withdrew their accounts. The regular closing of the bank at 1 o'clock saved it from further loss. Bankers say this run was probably started on account of the run on the Dime Savings, and that there will be no repetition.

Other prominent business men say that there may be the greatest upheaval in banking circles ever known in Peoria and that if the panic which is spreading over the city continues there may be a general collapse in banking circles. Small depositors gathered in wildly excited groups over the city. "How to get our money" was the only topic. Bank presidents, officers and directors attempted to allay the fears of the populace, but whether they will be able to succeed is a problem.

Bankers in Hasty Meetings.
In all of the other banks of the city there were hastily called meetings of directors and plans laid for possible runs. Unless further sensational disclosures are made leading bankers say there may be no danger to other institutions.

Total Defalcation Heavy.
When it was estimated the defalcation of N. C. Dougherty would reach half a million dollars it was looked upon as wild exaggeration and impossible. The investigation indicates that the figure will be reached and perhaps exceeded before all has been brought to light.

More Involved in Scandal.
Peoria, Ill., Oct. 9.—Where will the exposures in the Dougherty school fund scandal stop? That is the question Peoria people are asking themselves in the light of a fresh batch of revelations.

It has become known that the grand jury practically is convinced that Dougherty did not content himself with forging the indorsements of school scrip, but forged the entire orders in probably hundreds of instances. If this suspicion is substantiated the former school superintendent will be indicted for the forgery of the signature of Barnhart Meals, president of the board of education.

The grand jury will take up this angle of the inquiry before the return of the indictments in court and the arrest of the educator. The inquirers have directed their expert accountant, John McAllister, to lay before them a miscellaneous lot of school orders for examination and comparison with Mr. Meals' signatures. State's Attorney Scholes also was directed to engage a handwriting expert to pass on the question.

Forest Fires Sweep California.
Santa Barbara, Cal., Oct. 9.—Disastrous forest fires are still raging. The flames swept over a space five miles long and three miles wide, extending along the foothills above Montecito, Summerland, and Carpinteria.

Fires are now burning the densely covered valleys and the mountainsides of Toro, Romero, Ward and Fithian canyons are veritable furnaces. The flames have burned over thirty ranches and destroyed houses, barns and other buildings on twelve farms. The loss to the ranchers in buildings alone is $50,000.

If winds spring up the magnificent homes in upper Montecito valley will be threatened, together with the towns of Summerland, Foreno and Carpinteria.

PREMIUMS ARE MUCH TOO HIGH

Reduction of the Expense in Getting
New Business the First Step to Be Taken — Competition Blamed for Bad Condition of Affairs.

New York, Oct. 9.—David Parks Packler, former president of the Actuarial society, in discussing the question of life insurance, declares in emphatic terms that policy holders pay too much. He says:

"Recent revelations as to the management of certain life insurance companies naturally have called public attention to their heavy expenditures, and many persons believe they charge far higher premiums than is necessary. That the cost of life insurance is greater than it should be is beyond question, and we may say fairly that this probably is the only business in which competition has not had the effect of reducing the cost to the people. On the other hand, the excess net cost, after due allowance for dividends, is not as great as often is supposed."

"In manufactures, agriculture, and transportation great reductions in cost have been made within a score of years. This cheapening has been effected partly by cutting down the primary cost of materials to the producer before they were offered for sale and partly by reducing the expense of transferring them to the public after production, the latter saving being effected through improved systems of consolidations that have cheapened and simplified work."

Only Competition: Hiring of Agents.

"In life insurance, however, it is impossible to reduce what may be called the primary cost of affording insurance to the public, that depends upon the rate of mortality, which is nearly unchangeable and is practically the same in a large company as in a small company. Therefore, the only way to economize is by reducing the secondary elements of cost, i. e., the expense of getting business and the taking care of it at the home office after it has been obtained."

"Practically all the business of life insurance companies comes through their agents and solicitors. Competition for business really is competition to obtain agents that will bring in business, and the natural effect of this has been to increase the commissions paid them and thus necessarily to enhance the cost of the insured. While this particularly is true of the companies that are working under high pressure in the race to obtain the largest business, all, including the most conservative, have been compelled to pay more than is proper, and even the most careful are paying commissions on an average twice as large as when the writer entered the business."

Pennsylvania Politician Ill.
Ridgeway, Pa., Oct. 9.—J. K. P. Hall, state senator and Democratic state chairman, is seriously ill from pneumonia.

Answer to Packers Ready.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Government attorneys have completed arrangements to meet the demurrer filed Friday by the indicted packers against the indictments charging them with monopolizing the meat trade. It is probable that the argument on the demurrers to the nine counts in the indictment and the plea of not guilty which is to be entered will take at least one day. The government is constantly issuing subpoenas for men in Chicago who will testify in the trial, but their identity is being carefully kept secret.

Metcalf May Resign.

Washington, Oct. 9.—Secretary Metcalf is in poor health and has been for some time. Much of the work of the department has been shifted on the shoulders of Assistant Secretary Murray and Commissioner of Corporations Garfield. This, those close to Mr. Metcalf say, will probably cause him to resign should he not regain his health in the near future.

Fire Loss in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 9.—Fire gutted the store of the W. K. Morrison Hardware company in Nicollet avenue, causing a loss estimated at $75,000. There was a considerable quantity of explosives in the stock, and for a time it was feared the fire would spread to other buildings. The loss is covered by insurance.
